Usage and Responsibilities

Using MGB is straightforward, but it is essential to follow these Terms, Precautions, and Instructions to reduce the risk of losing your protected information. You acknowledge that without your MGB, you will not be able to access the protected information it contains. If your MGB is lost, stolen, damaged, or destroyed, there will be no way to recover your protected information or access your cryptocurrency funds. We develop MGB and related services in an open-source fashion to enable testing and verification of their functionality and security. The Instructions provide all the necessary information to handle your information and funds without relying on our software.

Limitation of Liability

The liability we assume regarding the sale of MGB is limited to the security of the MGB itself. No software included with the package shares this responsibility. Bitcoin wallet agents also do not share responsibility for events occurring on a public blockchain where transactions take place. We do not create barriers to prevent the use of MGB with third-party software or services, but we assume no legal responsibility for such usage.

Agreement and Responsibility

If you do not agree with or understand any information in these Terms, Instructions, and/or if you lack the legal capacity to use MGB and manage cryptocurrency funds, you should not use MGB. If you choose to use MGB in a manner non-compliant with the Precautions, you are solely responsible for any resulting damage or harm.
